NCSU Libraries Receives First Million Dollar Gift

A couple from North Carolina, who wish to remain anonymous, recently established a charitable remainder trust worth more than one million dollars for the North Carolina State University Libraries. The trust will fund an unrestricted endowment for the Libraries.

Susan K. Nutter, vice provost and director of Libraries, said, "Not only is this extremely generous gift one of the largest and most important gifts ever received by the Libraries, it is also a vote of high confidence in our collection, services and staff. The endowment is intended to provide flexible funding to meet future needs of the NCSU Librarians that cannot be fully met through other funding sources. In this difficult year of budget reduction, this unrestricted gift is an inspiration."

Funds from the gift will become available in the future, after the trust terminates.

The NCSU Libraries is an academic research library with strengths in science, engineering and technology. It has holdings of more than three million volumes, 47,000 print and electronic serials, and hundreds of databases, making it one of the most comprehensive research collections in the nation.
